Barracks rat — Some Marines stationed overseas turn into a hermit because they're homesick, depressed and such. With the advent of the internet and social media, it's that much easier to hole up in your barracks room and shut out the rest of the real world. It's very unfortunate, because they're missing out on an opportunity to see a foreign country and get exposed to their culture, people and ways of life. (-_-;

MOS School — After a non-infantry Marine graduates boot camp, they'll take some boot leave, go to MCT (Marine Combat Training) and finally to MOS School. Infantry Marines will go to their MOS School — SOI (School of Infantry) — after boot leave. Rumors abound regarding each type of MOS School, but I think some are true, while others are just exaggerated stories for entertainment. (^^;

MOS = Military Occupational Specialty. Basically, the type of job a Marine is assigned to do.

Purple Heart = medal awarded to military personnel who are wounded or killed in combat/enemy attacks.
